Preface

An international round table on “The Internationalisation of Business and Prevention of Financial Crimes” took place in Saint Petersburg, Russian Federation, on June 30th and July 1st 2014 to confront the best approaches on how to start a business and to address several issues related to the impact of financial crimes on economic, financial and legal systems in Italy and Russia.

The two working sessions, organised by the Saint Petersburg State University of Economics with the high patronage of the Italian General Consulate in St. Petersburg, presented an important opportunity to identify good state practices in each country and to promote and encourage more international cooperation and understanding among universities, business innovative centres, scientists and experts from international organisations, public institutions and firms working in dynamical economic systems.

The meeting provided an opportunity for constructive and sincere comparison with high representatives of institutions and organisations that contributed more to reflections on such crucial topics as those presented in this collection of reports.
